THROTTLING THE PRESS

SOME attention has been paid to recent efforts of the Democratic party to muzzle the press, but the statesmen who take tricks at the helm of the ship of state unite in saying the party is not responsible for the acts of a few individuals, even though the list includes members of the cabinet and the postmaster general. In any event the fact remains that the administration at Washington has sedulously essayed to secure a stranglehold on the moulders of public opinion in a manner that had not been attempted by any previous administration. The Wilson administration stands on record as the first from the time of Washington that ever deliberately tried to prostitute the press by offering a bonus for the perversion of sentiments and the construction of opinion. This act was in the form of a direct bribe to western editors. The order evinces such contemptible meanness that it is difficult to comprehend how any administration could stoop to the infamy which, nevertheless, is a fact that can be established by reference to the files of the Surveyor General's office or the Register of Lands at Carson City. It is a matter of record. No one has ever tried to deny it or to clear the skirts of the administration of the charge. Simmered down the statement is that the Wilson administration was the first in power to issue a direct order to all officials of the land office that applications for patent, all public printing and all patronage emanating from that source for the printer must be given to a publisher FRIENDLY TO THE ADMINISTRATION.

If this is not a bribe we would like to have another definition than what is contained in Webster's unabridged, which reads as follows: "To give or promise a reward or consideration to, with a view to pervert the judgment or corrupt the conduct; to hire for bad purposes; to corrupt a judge, a witness or a legislator."

Under previous Republican and Democratic administrations it was optional with the advertiser to select his own means of publicity, so long as the paper was one of general circulation and in other ways conformed to the requirements of the Interior department. If he happened to be a Republican and, during a Democratic administration, wanted to apply for a patent, he had the privilege of advertising in any paper of his choice. He was not compelled to patronize a Democrat. The department assumes no responsibility for the publication. The money is paid by the advertiser and he secures his patent after making the proper publicity. When the Wilson administration came into power the first act under Secretary Lane was to notify all branches of the land office that advertising must go to papers friendly to the administration. This stands as a matter of record as an official order and cannot be disputed. The object of the order was palpable. The intention was to whip into line the publishers of papers in mining camps and throughout the western country where the Republican vote was strongest and it was thought that the inducements held forth by public advertising would bring every editor into line. The land office patronage in this county is appraised at several thousand dollars a year, which is calculated to arouse the cupidity of the average editor. According to the ruling of the land office the Daily Bonanza or any other Republican paper in Nevada could have increased its revenue by simply overlooking the faults of the administration and regarding its performances with the friendly eye of charity. The Bonanza refused to be whipped into line or surrender principles for which it had fought manfully for the last fifteen years, and therefore the Bonanza has not been included in the papers pulling at the public teat for sustenance.

However, since such an eminent authority as Woodrow Wilson has established the practice, there is no reason why the Hughes-Fairbanks administration should not follow the precedent. Furthermore, since there will not be another Democratic administration for the next fifty years, the prospect for Nevada editors, who survive the four years of proscription, suggests a new fleet of Super-Sixes skimming around the state.

The piano is on the wane, according to the report of the manufacturers of that much abused instrument. This is better than being on the wail. The phonograph is driving out the strident tinnitulation of the beginner whose efforts resemble a dozen cats and one dog loose in a tin shop.

Ford, the peacemaker, is proving a pacemaker for other employers by sending 200 men into the frontier service at full pay for six months. That is the right kind of pacifist. A policeman without a club or gun would not be respected.

A Political Dictionary of Common Expressions

BY LETSON BALLIET

ULTIMATUM—Formerly it meant the last word. This use is now obsolete, and bad form. Modern usage makes it mean merely a basis for an argument.

"MEN OF NOTE"—When used in the plural form, means illustrious or famous men; in the singular, "MAN OF NOTES," means a spineless person in position of authority who writes "notes" as an excuse for inaction.

"MEN OF MARK"—When the first word is plural, means men with a badge of honor or distinction, but when the last word is plural, as "MAN OF MARKS," refers to a person who accidentally obtained notoriety by writing notes. Similar to "man of notes."

NOW—Refers to a "MARKED MAN" who is slated to lose a position, in which he has shown miserable incompetency.

MEN OF LETTERS—Used to designate literary men and authors as a distinction between business men and executive men.

LETTERS OF MARQUE—A letter carried by captains of privately owned armed vessels, to distinguish them from pirates, as commerce and business destroyers. By comparison, may also refer to A CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION given to a private individual, who destroys business, commerce and merchant marine service.

WAR—In Europe it means a conflict of arms, between nations or tribes, which results in more or less loss of life and property on both sides. In America, it means words, notes and letters upon one side, arrayed against rapine, murder, brigandage, insult and destruction of life and liberty on one side only.

NEGOTIATE—To treat with another; to make arrangement (this use is now obsolete). Modern use has established a meaning as an excuse for inaction, or procrastination; some times political cowardice.

DEMOCRACY—Formerly this meant government by the people in which the supreme power rests directly with the people. (Very impractical, inefficient and has never been tried.) By misuse, it now means nothing but a name applied to a political party presided over by a representative who is weak vacillating and impractical, who makes excuses for violation of pledges and promises, as a demagogue.

DEMAGOGUE—A leader 'who presides over and rules a rabble by promises and deceit. Politically, a leader who does not keep his pledges and promises.

REPUBLICAN—A government of the people, by the people, for the people, administered through representatives selected by the people. Over one hundred years of practical and successful operations in many countries on both hemispheres.

WAR IS IMMINENT—Means an excuse for another note.
